THIS PIG WILL HUNT

KA-BAR's Johnson Adventure Blades Potbelly is a camp friendly attack hog.

KA-BAR is known primarily for military knives, but when they hooked up with Boar Hunter Magazine field editor Steve Johnson they instantly became the hunter's friend. The Potbelly—listed under the signature line of Johnson's Adventure Blades—is a handful of field knife that can do just about everything you ask around the camp.

The Potbelly's portly 7.2" hollowground 1095 cro-van blade flares nicely at the mid-section, making easy work of butchering and chopping chores. The knife's ample 5.5" full-tang handle can accommodate the largest of mitts and the grain-textured Zytel handle offers excellent grip.

The blade, of 1095 cro-van (a favorite among high-carbon steel fans) is not stainless but has a tough black coating, and a little oil along the edge will give you all the rust protection you need. Unlike many of the new-age stainless steels which require a diamond stone, the Potbelly's 1095 blade can be sharpened on a traditional Arkansas stone or, in a pinch, a rock.

But what about tricky work like skinning and caping? No problem. Included in the Potbelly's tan nylon sheath is a sleeve housing the Johnson's Adventure Piggyback, a small, skeletonized stainless steel skinner (6" overall with a 2.6" skinning blade) for the more delicate field dressing work. The sheath also has multiple MOLLE attachment points and a pouch with 8' of paracord. Better yet, the price for this boar of a cutter and all its amenities weighs in at a very reasonable $128.05 retail, you provide the pig. A heck of a deal on a lot of knife!
